This test project is structured as follows:

```
docs/
  index.md
  test.md

nested/
  nested-test.md

This is the `index.md` page.

Test links to a root level page

Basic links, pointing to files at `docs/` level (same level as this page):

- ./index.md // works
- ./test.md // works

Test Subheading Links on root level pages

These links point to the "Test Subheading Links on root level pages" H3, just above this line.

- anchor-only syntax: #test-subheading-links // doesn't work; not a link
- full syntax: ./index.md#test-subheading-links // doesn't work; not a link

Test links to a non-root page

These links point to the `docs/nested/nested-test.md` page.

- Basic link: ./nested/nested-test.md // doesn't work; not a link

- Anchor link: ./nested/nested-test.md#subheading-test // works, BUT ignores anchor fragment

Test Page 1 (Root level)

Test Page 3 (Nested)

This is "nested-test.md". This page is nested one level deep inside `docs/nested/`.

Basic links, root `docs/` level:

- ../index.md // Does not work
- ../test.md // Does not work

Basic link to this page, referenced directly:

- ../nested-test.md // Does not work

Basic link to this page, but going up a directory level first and then back down:

- ../nested/nested-test.md // Does not work
